PEER REVIEW POLICY: [Double blind peer review]

Journal includes review articles, original research articles, short communications, etc of medical sciences after being peer reviewed by esteemed faculties of medical science.

The journal has a team of editors for each specialty from different parts/states of India. An editor acts as handling editor for the manuscript submitted to his/her section. The number of editors for a particular specialty depends on the submission the journal attracts. They are specialists of considerable standing in their field having published articles in national and international journals of MEDICAL SCIENCES. The editor makes initial evaluation of the submitted script, and if finds suitable, checks the manuscript and sends it to two peer reviewers having experience of reviewing manuscripts in the past. Once the reviews are returned, the editor evaluates these and makes an initial recommendation [reject, accept, request minor/major correction]. The manuscript, with the reviewer's comments, and the decision from the editor is sent back to the author. If revision is required, the editor receives the revised manuscript and then reaches the decision on the manuscript. The editor may send the manuscript back to the reviewer if he finds necessary. The criteria used for acceptance of a given manuscript are determined by the reviewer reports.